

San Francisco Live/Work Cohousing

sfcohousing.org

sustainableaffordablecommunity urbancohousing

A Presentation on Cohousing with Charles Durrett and Kathryn McCamant

Tuesday December 20, 2011 6:00pm
San Francisco Main Library 100 Larkin Street
Hispanic/Latino Conference Room, Lower Level

Charles Durrett and Kathryn McCamant of Durrett and McCamant Architects and The Cohousing Company will be speaking in San Francisco to present Cohousing to all who are interested in starting a community here in San Francisco.

Charles and Kathryn are credited with bringing cohousing, a European idea, to the US. They are the authors of "Creating Cohousing: Building Sustainable Communities", and have worked with over 50 cohousing communities to date. Come and join others who would like to learn more about how we can make it happen here in San Francisco.

What would it be like to own your home in a thriving community, close to work and school?

Cohousing is housing created with the design input of the residents, according to common goals such as sustainability, community, and simply living well by sharing more. It includes individual homes supplemented by shared facilities and common areas. Management is consensus-driven and done by the residents. There are over two dozen cohousing communities in the Bay Area to date, and it's about time to build the first community here in San Francisco! Together we can make it happen. We hope for residents of all ages and backgrounds, singles, couples, and families. A diversity of uses, including residential, work/live spaces, and retail storefronts, will enable residents to run businesses within the community. Shared gardens, open space, and a common house provide opportunities to know your neighbors, get involved, and live the good life, right here in the best city in the world.

For more information, visit SFCohousing.org
call Lauren at (415) 971-3089
or email laurenmendoza@gmail.com